FRESNO DAN SIGNED MORTGAGE WITHOUT READING PAPER

"I SUPPOSE I WAS STUPID," HE EXPLAINS IN REPLY TO SCHARTON.

By CLEMENT L. POLLOCK.

Fresno Dan snatched through the corridors of the courthouse at 9:45. I thought that I should ask him his opinion of William L. Scharton, who has been grilling him for the past five days.

"What do you think of Scharton?" I asked.

Fresno Dan smiled, something that he rarely does.

"You are all right," he replied. "The doctor better not say."

Just then Ferdinand B. Almy came along. He smiled at Fresno Dan.

"The doctor, Scharton, goes," he said. "The ages he will find out that Fresno Dan is the real man."

Dan's face was now filled with a true looking glow of wisdom today. It was a wonderful display of maturity. The lady who writes poetry was among them. The crowd came early to get good seats.

Fresno Dan took the stand for the sixth day.

Then Scharton asked to be allowed to call Eugene C. Tipton and Ferdinand B. Almy to settle whether Fresno Dan had waived his rights to the estate before he was recognized by William C. Russell as his brother.

To Clear Up "Conspiracy."

"I want to clear up a conspiracy," said Scharton. "I'll take Mr. Nason's statement whether or not there was such an agreement. It would shorten the trial if that were settled. It is true that if Fresno Dan signed such a paper, I am sure that he would not do it with this witness for good and all with this witness."

"What do you say, Mr. Nason?" said Master Pevey.

"I don't know," replied Nason.

"I don't know," replied Nason.

MASTER PEVEY, HEARING RUSSELL CASE.

Sketches in court by AMERICAN artist.

Gilbert A. A. Pevey, presiding at the Russell hearing, on appointed by the Supreme Court to hear the contest brought about by the appeal taken by Fresno Dan from the decision against him in the long fight before the Probate Court. Master Pevey receives $15 a day. His denunciations are calm, dispassionate and judicious. In a hearing before a master the lawyers on each side are allowed a little more latitude than they are in a trial court and they usually take advantage of it.

There were many new faces in the audience. All listened intently.

"What business was your father in before he was in the fertilizer business?" asked Scharton.

"In the clothing business," replied Nason.

"Have you read the testimony of William C. Russell?" asked Scharton.

"No," replied Nason.

"He sits in the court with a magnifying glass," said Scharton.

"With a magnifying glass, her charming husband," said Scharton.

"He has the biggest that's ever been seen," said Scharton.

"And she smiles and goes on chewing gum!" said Scharton.

"You said you knew Kate Hawkins," said Scharton.

"Yes," replied Nason.

"Do you see her in court?" asked Scharton.

"No, I don't see her," replied Nason.

"No, I don't see her," replied Nason.

"No, I don't see her," replied Nason.

"What else did you have?"
"A revolver."
"Did you buy it?"
"Yes."
"Where did you get the money?"
"Father gave it to me."
"What was it for?"
"I was promised six dollars a week."
"What did you get for your year's work?"
"Father gave me a hundred dollars when I left."
"What were you paid weekly?"
"I don't remember that it was paid anything weekly. I was not on the payroll. Occasionally I was given a dollar or so."
"Was that charge of the pay roll?"
"No, hardly."
"I think not."
"Fresno then said he met Hardy in Mr. Upson's office. Mr. Upson, Mr. Curwright, Mr. Upson, Miss Amy and Hardy were in the office at that time."

Nason Wasn't There.
"Did you ever see Hardy at Mr. Nason's office?"
"I can't say that."
"When did you see Mr. Hardy?"
"I was in the office."
"That was when Mr. Almy, Miss Amy, Mr. Curwright, Mr. Upson, Mr. Nason, Mr. Upson, got in to Mr. Nason."
"Did you see Mr. Nason was there?"
"That's right," replied Scharon.

FRESNO DAN AND JOHN DREW, WHOM MANY CALL SAME MAN

The long-haired Melrose boy, John Drew, was thought by several citizens of that city to have returned as Fresno Dan to claim part of the Russell fortune. This picture of Drew was taken when he was about twelve years old.

Want to eliminate Mr. Nason entirely from his life, if possible.
Fresno Dan finally explained that he was living in Fresno, but didn't know who he was at the time.
"How long were you there?"
"Half an hour or longer."
Fresno Dan said he could not remember questions asked him on that occasion.
"Why can't you remember?"
"Because I was asleep."
"Did you talk with Willie last night?"
"Did you eat dinner with Willie last night?"
"Where were you from 2 to 9?"
"In Boston."
"Where did you go?"
"I couldn't remember."
"Where were there asked about him?"
"I went to the Public Library."
"What time?"
"I don't know."
"Where didn't you buy a Boston Globe?"
"I don't know."
"Did you read about yourself?"
"Yes."
Fresno Dan said he had something to eat on summer street, and that he dropped into three or four saloons. When he got home he had some more to eat.
"Who was at home?"
"My brother."

Didn't Speak to Willie.

"Did you speak to Willie?"

"No."

"Any cause for that?"

"No, he doesn't talk much."

Fresno Dan was then asked about himself.

"What kind of a dog did you have?"

"A water spaniel."

"How old was the dog?"

"Six, seven, eight or nine years old."

"What kind of a dog was the dog when you first bought him?"

"A water spaniel."

Fresno Dan said Mr. Stanchini, a carpenter, lived near his home and Charlie Palmer painted it.

"Remember any of the department?"

"I remember George Storey."

Russell House Company.

Fresno Dan said Melrose had three houses completed in 1888—the Highland, Russell and Wyoming.

"How did it come to be called the Russell House Company?"

"That's more than I can tell."

"Did your father give anything to the company?"

"I don't remember now, he gave them a house carriage."

"He gave them some books."

"What were the names of some of them?"

"John Brown—I was going to say the life of John Brown, but I guess that book got out to the same house."

George Storey belonged to the Russell Company, Fresno Dan recalled a hand out to Melrose called the "Endeavor."

"Who was in charge of it?"

"I don't remember."

Fresno Dan could not remember much about the fire department. Fresno said he could not remember much because it was years ago.

"What character was there in Melrose known to everybody?"

"I can't remember."

"What was the doctor?"

"I don't remember."

"Who was a doctor?"

"Yes, he was a doctor."

Remember Sunday School Boys. But Is Shy on Many Details.

"I don't remember."

"Who told you since you came back?"

"I don't remember."

"What was the cause?"

"Knocked on the head."

"Didn't you hear it was because of a love affair?"

"No."

"Didn't you hear he was killed?"

"No."

"Do you know Dr. Parker?"

"No. He spoke to me at noon."

"What did he say?"

"He asked me if I remembered him."

"Did you?"

"No. I told him I didn't."

"He told you he was a Melrose playboy?"

"Yes, but I didn't recall him."

"Remember the Webster?"

"Yes."

"Name their first names?"

"No."

"What did the family consist of?"

"Father, mother, son and daughter."

"And her hair was dark brown."

"What was the daughter's name?"

"I don't remember."

"Describe her?"

"She had dark hair."

"Dark brown," queried Scharon.

"Yes, dark brown."

Fresno Dan said he did not recall that there was a factory on Grove street. Melrose.

An advertisement was taken until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

LOOK FOR SURPRISES

AT MALDEN HEARING

Surprises are expected at the investigation to be made by the Malden Board of Aldermen tonight of the street and water companies. Chairman Charles T. Hall, Frank H. Carline, and ex-alderman John M. Davis, the three commissioners, have been summoned to appear before the board.

Commissioner Davis, who has not been friendly in his relations with the other members of the commission and has been refused to sign the payroll, says that he has a number of notes taken at meetings of the commission, and has been waiting an opportunity to make them public.

Let us all hope for good weather next Sunday.

If we can't have the sun, at least we can hope for an improvement over last Sunday, when the rain fell in torrents between 2 and 5 p. m., necessitating the postponement of the hunt for 'The Lady with the Green Parasol'.

With any kind of a reasonable spring for a weather next Sunday 'The Lady with the Green Parasol' will keep her appointment with AMERICAN readers.

It would have been absolutely unfair to the majority of AMERICAN readers to have postponed the chase last Sunday during the downpour. Hence, Hunt was AMERICAN readers are entitled to a try for the Boston award, realized at Hunt, naturally expecting the hunt would be postponed. Consequently, there was only one fair thing to do—wait for better weather next Sunday when all can have as good a chance at the award.

'The Lady with the Green Parasol' will start about 10 o'clock and along the Huntington, from Condit's, where the hunt will go on under the auspices of 2 and 5 p. m. next Sunday, and the chase will go on under the same conditions as were arranged for last Sunday.

Any man, woman or child who desires to receive a copy of 'The Lady with the Green Parasol' should send her name to a Boston AMERICAN order for $100.

The only requirement is that the person who identifies 'The Lady with the Green Parasol' have in his or her hand $100 in cash. A copy of next Sunday's AMERICAN shall be sent to her. You are the Lady with the Green Parasol.

The circulation department will give everyone a chance to get more familiar with the details of the hunt and figure of 'The Lady with the Green Parasol.'

Turn in your picture (printed elsewhere in this paper, study it carefully). The capture and identification next Sunday is worth just $100 to someone.

CRACK ARMY ATHLETE MAY BE DIAMOND STAR

NEW YORK, July 23.—George W. Bowers, Jr., a United States Army officer and former gridiron star at West Point, may meet his lot with the Yankees in a few days and make a lot of fame in the big league.

He reported to Manager Weaver yesterday and impressed the Yankees' chief as well that he may be signed to finish the season.

Until recently Lieutenant Bowers was stationed at the Philippine Islands with Second Regiment of Cavalry. At present he is enjoying a four months' furlough, and when not serving Camp Sum his time is his own, so there is nothing that can prevent him from doing a big league outfield if he so desires should the Yankees offer him a contract.

One of the spectators who watched the young man exercise in practice on the ball yesterday afternoon knew they were gaining on a United States army officer and one of West Point's famed athletes. He was out on the field did in one of the team's early training stunts, and worked with

Root's Brief for the British on the Canal Question

Senator Root has espoused the contention of the English government that the United States has no right to favor its own ships in the matter of canal tolls at Panama.

It is not to be supposed that Mr. Root is a mere sentimental Anglophile—blindly eager to do whatever they do in London. The sudden and eloquent Toryism of his speech last week in the Senate must be attributed to other impulses.

It should be borne in mind that the cause of the British in this case is the cause of the Shipping Trust and the transcontinental railroads. And to such a cause every fibre of Mr. Root's mentality instinctively responds. Said Mr. Root on Monday:

I am reluctant to make an argument against the rights of the United States. * * * But it is certain to me that if the provision now before us, making the discrimination against which Great Britain protests, is enacted, the question raised will be one for arbitration under the Hay-Pauncefote treaty. * * * This is a question we cannot finally decide. * * * Our right to legislate may be decided against us by the Hague tribunal. * * * No one can tell what a vast burden of debt would be piled up if we collected tolls and the decision of the court required us to repay them. * * * We may be subjected to a ruinous demand upon the Treasury.

In short, Mr. Root is moved by some power, which seems to him greater than the United States, to deny the sovereignty of the United States over the Canal Zone. He thinks that Congress is presumptuous in attempting to legislate on the subject of canal tolls, and that such presumption may be severely punished—with "ruinous" consequences to the United States treasury.

Mr. Root has the reputation of being a great corporation lawyer. He has, however, no very great reputation to lose as a constitutional lawyer—else it is likely that not even the strong tug of his sympathy for the transportation trusts could have drawn him into the preposterous position he has taken in this matter.

It should be perfectly clear, as a matter of constitutional and international law, that the Panama Canal is an American inland waterway, as truly as the Erie Canal; that the government of the United States has absolute sovereignty over it; that Congress can legislate in the matter as it pleases—can destroy the canal, if it likes, or open it to the world's commerce on its own terms, and that if the Hay-Pauncefote treaty stands in the way it can be put out of the way in a manner conformable to the custom and comity of nations.

The complete answer to Senator Root's brief for the British is, first, that the Hay-Pauncefote treaty contains nothing in derogation of American sovereignty over the canal, and, second, that we should immediately denounce and abrogate the treaty if it did.

Senator Lodge offered fresh and convincing confirmation of the first point in his speech in the Senate Saturday. He recalled the fact that he was himself the member of the Foreign Relations Committee who reported to the Senate in 1900 the approved draft of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty with Great Britain. Mr. Lodge declared that the United States had retained by the treaty full rights to form its own policy toward American vessels. He defended the principle of free tolls for American ships. He said:

I was of the opinion, at the time I brought the report, that it left us in complete control in determining the position of our own vessels. I did not suppose that any limitation was imposed, and did not believe that the United States was included among the nations to be treated with equality in the treaty terms.

Our right, or England's right, to denounce and abrogate this treaty—or any treaty—when it ceases to be mutually useful to the contracting parties is equally clear.

There is nothing about a treaty that makes it more sacred than the Constitution. And the Constitution gives the government of the United States sovereignty over all the lands and waters of the United States. It is the custom of nations that a treaty may be changed or annulled when it ceases to be just and equitable to one of the parties.

Commercial treaties are bargains—in which privilege is matched against privilege. Such conventions as the Hay-Pauncefote treaty rest upon the idea of reciprocal advantages, each party obtaining an equivalent for what is yielded. The life goes out of them when one of the parties fails to obtain such an equivalent.

We made, for example, a treaty with England in 1854, with reference to Canadian reciprocity, and we annulled this treaty in 1865—without straining in the least our friendly relations with England. In the last ninety years we have made reciprocity treaties with forty-two countries, and we have amended them, continued them or terminated them—without question of our right to do so.

The simple fact is that the Root theory of the present situation is a baseless fabrication, invented and propagated by private interests. Representative Knowland, of California, explained to the President last week how the Canadian railroads, prompted by intercoastal railroad interests on this side of the line, have instigated the protest of the British Government against free Panama tolls for the ships of the United States.

Mr. Root may not have any personal initiative in this intrigue. But its purpose has been to stir the latent sympathies of his heart and spur him to a championship that is congenial to his habit.

THE HOME MARKET CLUB,
77 Sumner Street.

Editor Boston AMERICAN.

Please accept my hearty congratulations on your vigorous editorial of July 18 on the attitude of the Democratic party toward the American policy of protection.

Nothing could so strengthen the influence of the Boston AMERICAN in the industrial community as a consistent and steadfast advocacy of that economic system so long inaugurated under Washington, approved by Jefferson and Jackson and endorsed by Lincoln, and under which this comparatively barren section of the country has developed a manufacturing supremacy which is the envy of the world.

A paper which is truly "American" will stand firmly for the policy which has made the progress of our country possible.

Respectfully yours,

THOMAS O. MARVIN,
Secretary.

Dr. Parkhurst's Article

—ON—

An Early Sermon of Mine on Parsimony and Progress That Lasts Is Slow

Written for the American by Dr. C. H. Parkhurst
His opinion that a man gains philosophy in his rough guide to prescription, and it is as applicable on flat ground as on ground that is turned up on edge.

His Optimism Was Found

ed on Reasonable

Conditions

Of course, we arrived at the summit whole and unscathed, and returned in the same placid state of mind and undisturbed condition of body. My mountain view of the situation was of an optimistic cast, but his optimism was not of a silly order, but founded on reasonable conditions.

To be hopeful merely because one is determined to be hopeful is childish and quite another thing from being hopeful because taking the steps by which it is rational to believe that one's hopes will be realized.

Of course, my guide made no promise as to how much time would be required to complete the ascent. That was left indefinite; but to be left indefinite in every man's program. It might have required all day and all night.

The only mistake I made was that we were going to get there because we were going to pursue a policy of quietness, persistence and self-reliance.

And that is a picture of the way in which results generally are accomplished. It is not done by revolution; by taking one step steadily and surely on the top of the preceding steps.

When things move wholesomely and in such a way that the ground goes over does not have to be retraced they move not by leaps and bounds, nor by any short cut, but by a process that is conservative.

That is to say, a process that shows a respect for the past as well as a zeal for the future. Revolution may sometimes be necessary.

Perhaps that was the case in France in 1793. We said it was in our own case in 1776. But, in general, as Victor Hugo once said, "Revolutions are the BRUTALITIES of progress."

Even the Socialists have this to their credit, that in the face of Haywood's advocacy of revolutionary methods, the Socialists in convention at Indianapolis last month voted by more than two to one to adopt conservative, evolutionary methods in terms of the following resolution: "Any member of the party who opposes political action or any other method of violence as a weapon of the working class to aid in its emancipation, shall be expelled from membership in the party."

Takes Time to Retrace

Steps, but There Is

Plenty of Time

Such action, especially when taken by men socially inclined, is a clear indication that, as a people, we are arrived at such a condition of intelligence and respect for righteous authority that no results can be regarded as permanently achieved unless secured by due process that is untroubled by lawlessness or blinded by passion.

Whatever is done otherwise will have to be done over again. Retracing traversed ground costs time, but there is no other commodity of which there is such ample abundance.

EVERYBODY in Massachusetts will want next Sunday's AMERICAN, for its editor for that one day will be the Governor of the State, the Hon. Eugene Noble Foss. More than that, everybody in New England will want it, for what the Governor will have to say editorially will be in the interest of everyone, from Eastport to the Berkshires, and from the Canadian line to the Sound.

Just a bit of warning. Better order your Sunday AMERICAN early from your newsdealer; it is the only way to be sure of getting it.

Two more "Governors' Editions" are to follow next month. Governor Aram J. Tophier of Rhode Island will be the editor of the Sunday AMERICAN of August 4, and Governor John A. Mead of Vermont will edit the issue of Sunday, August 11.
